Class Secretary.

JAMES HARDY ROPES.

To the Class of Eighty-nine:

I take pleasure in presenting the Fourth Secretary's Report.

The addresses of the following members of the Class are not known, and I should be grateful for any information about the men:

Clinton T. Brainard,
Charles Foss,
Charles D. Gibbons,
Willard R. Kimball,
William J. Latta,
William V. Martin,
William B. Ogden,
Wallace A. Parker,
Emil C. Pfeiffer,
Albert C. Robinson,
Frank P. Sheldon,
Alexander Young.

Over 30 graduates and about the same number of temporary members and special students have not done me the courtesy to reply to either of my circulars.

The members of the Class living at a distance will be interested to know that the '89 gate, in the new fence around the Yard, standing opposite Linden St. on Massachusetts Avenue, is nearly completed. It is a beautiful and permanent memorial of our Class. It is the next gate west from the large entrance in front of the Library.

Five graduates of '89 and four temporary members and special students served in the Spanish War in 1898. Their war-record is given at the end of the body of this Report.

JAMES HARDY ROPES.

ALEXANDER HOLMES.

Has been member of the Massachusetts Legislature from Kingston, Mass.

JAMES EDWARD HOMANS.

"About August 1, 1898, I removed to Flushing, Long Island, where I have since resided. Literature and publishing.

"I was librarian of the Harvard Club (N. Y.) for one year (1899–1900).

"During the last twelve years I have devoted my attention to writing as a profession. I have enjoyed several newspaper controversies, and received letters, laudatory and otherwise, from nearly every section of the country. For a time I wrote fierce jeremiads to the daily press under the nom-de-plume of 'Robert Lawrence.' But latterly I have avoided this subscription, because a certain real Robert Lawrence vigorously protested that he was getting the credit for my contributions, while my sentiments were odious to him. Since then I have refrained from this form of plagiaristic forgery.

"My letters contributed to the daily press since Jan. 1, 1898 are as follows: 'Evolution and Christianity' (N. Y. Times, Jan. 3, 1898); 'Infant Damnation' (Times, Jan. 4, 1898); 'An Attack on "Christian Science"' (N. Y. Sun, Dec. 30, 1898); 'As to "Christian Science"' (N. Y. Times, Jan. 16, 1899); 'Christian Science and Decent People' (Times, Jan. 25, 1899); 'The Bishop and His Critics' (Times, Feb. 1, 1899); 'Mrs. Eddy's "Answer" Answered' (Commercial Advertiser, April 1, 1899); 'Minot Savage and Spiritualism' (Times, April 7, 1899); 'The Policy of Non-Resistance' (Times, May 1, 1899); 'The Briggs Controversy' (May 7, 1899); 'The Proposed Conference of Irreligion' (June 18, 1899); 'Mr. Crowe and the Non-Churchgoers' (Times, July 2, 1899); 'Calvinism and Infant Salvation' (Sun, July 30, 1899); 'Minot Savage's New-fangled Dogmatism' (Sun, Oct. 28, 1899); 'Mr. Savage's "God"' (Sun, Nov. 2, 1899); 'Two Eternally Diverse Concepts of Religion' (Sun, Nov. 26, 1899); 'How is the Bible Inspired' (Sun, Dec. 10, 1899).

"Early in 1900 I began the publication of a magazine, The Christian Forum, devoted to exploiting my views of religion, etc., and particularly intended to 'show up' the fatuity and stupidity of 'modern innovations in religious thought.' To the first number (April 1900) of this monthly I contributed two articles —'Revelation Nevertheless' and 'A Higher Critic Criticised.' For the second number (May 1900) I wrote 'The Scientific Accuracy of Genesis,' and several sharp-pointed editorial reflections. After the issuance of my second number I concluded that the expense was greater than I could very well afford, and so discontinued my magazine. During the summer of 1900 I conducted a small paper, The Living Word, containing the sermons of Rev. A. C. Dixon, then of Brooklyn, now of Boston, but this also went the way of all papers. In December, 1900, I issued a small pamphlet entitled 'What is "German Scholarship"'? It is devoted to the proposition that the supremacy of professional students and theorizers in the domains of letters, science, philosophy and theology is not productive of the best results in the discovery of truth, and, in many ways, is an evil and a 'trust.'

"I have other books on the 'ways,' including a study of 'evolution' and another on the 'philosophy of religion.' Both will undoubtedly create antagonism and stir up controversy. After long study I have reached the conclusion that 'modern science' is no nearer finalities of any description than were the men who believed the earth flat and the sun its satellite. I think that I can make a very good 'bluff' at proving my point, which, of course, will quite annoy our irrational 'rationalists' and illiberal 'liberals,' who think that they now have things entirely their own way.

"In September 1899, a book over my name, entitled, 'Our Three Admirals,' biographical sketches of Farragut, Porter and Dewey, was issued by James T. White & Co., New York. While it is a rather creditable piece of press-work, it is by no means what it would have been had it included all my notes and illustrations. I have another work, entitled 'A B C of the Telephone,' which will shortly be issued by Theo. Audel & Co., New York City. I am also engaged on a work on the automobile for the same firm. Both will appear this year, and should interest 'people what like them kind of things.'

"I think there is little else to be recorded. I lead a quiet life, and shall continue so to do as far as possible. Having been through four railroad accidents, I eschew travel. I am not a society man, have fewer friends each day, and prefer books to 'folks' in the great majority of cases. If any '89 man is curious to see copies of my late magazine, of which several thousand still abide in a condition of 'innocuous desuetude,' I shall be pleased to send him such gratis. Likely the publishers of my books will do the same if 'the difference' is enclosed."

LOUIS LEVERETT HOOPER.

"During the summer of 1899 I took a most enjoyable trip to Europe, spending most of my time in Italy. From 1898 to 1900 I taught in Erasmus Hall High School, Brooklyn, N. Y. Since then I have been Headmaster of the Washington School for Boys, Washington, D. C. We have with us three other Harvard men: Wm. W. Gale, '88, Dr. Francis P. Morgan, '90, Allan Abbott, '96. We are aiming to build up, here at the national capital, a boys' school which shall carry out as far as possible the ideas for which Harvard stands. I am still unmarried. My address is, The Washington School for Boys, Wisconsin Avenue, Washington, D. C., where I shall be glad to see any '89 man who may be visiting the city."

Spanish-American War." Contributed the article on "The Camp at Ponce, Porto Rico."

"I went out with the troop that represented Squadron 'A,' N. G. N. Y., in the U. S. Volunteers during the Spanish-American War. Our command was in camp on Long Island, at Camp Alger, Va., and in various parts of Porto Rico. We took part in no actual fighting; but some of our experiences were sufficiently exciting. When the troop was mustered out, I rejoined my old troop (No. II) in Squadron 'A,' as a private. A second opportunity to observe the horrors of war was offered at Croton Dam, one year ago, when the Italians working at that place struck for higher pay. They inadvertently so terrified the sheriff of Westchester (a veritable Falstaff in girth and valor) that he appealed practically to the Governor for aid. The strenuous Teddy saw a chance too good to lose, so he out with his militia, horse and foot, twelve hundred strong and marched them upon the poor little hamlet of Dagos. The enemy however (except one assassin) were all for peace, and when they could for the chattering of their teeth, received us with smiles and songs. Here, but for a fortnight of sleeping in the mud, was the end o't. I am leaving the militia in June, a sergeant; having in the two wars upon the Latins writ my name thus large upon the annals of our country's wars."

GEORGE VERNON GRAY.

Residence, San Francisco, Cal.

"Was in Dawson, Yukon Territory, when last request for information was sent to my home address. Went into Dawson in 1897, via St. Michael and Yukon River, confined my attention entirely to mining, owning ground on Bonanza and Dominion Creeks. Remained in Dawson until Feb. 11, 1900, when I left for Cape Nome over the ice by sleigh and dogs, arriving in Nome, April 26, 1900, before navigation to Nome was open. Remained in Nome until Oct. 25, 1900, visiting all the surrounding country and going as far north as Cape York. Shall return to Dawson the end of this month— May — for an indefinite stay. Have been fairly successful, and as the saying up there goes, 'Did not get it all, but got a piece of it.'"

"THE COUNTERSIGN."

A POEM

READ AT THE THIRD TRIENNIAL DINNER

OF THE

CLASS OF EIGHTY-NINE, HARVARD.

Tuesday, June 28, 1898.

By Charles Warren.

Where the heated earth sends its mists aloft,
And the brilliant stars of the South look down
On the gleaming tents of a new-pitched camp,
And the sleeping faces of soldiers brown;
Where the night breeze rustles the palm-tree leaves,
And the surf in the distance rumbling breaks
On the sandy shore of a foreign isle,
The lonely picket his watch now takes.

Where the ocean masters slowly steam,
Are the darting searchlights cleave the sky;
Where the signal lamps' responsive gleam
Is planning to-morrow's victory;
Where the boys in blue and the boys in gray
Are lying to-night all side by side;
Where college rivals and college mates
Are landing together with every tide;

Where over the silent camp there floats
The flag which the Cubans hail with joy;
Where terrors lurk in the shadows black,

Where the cuckoo's song is a note of decoy;
Where a waving branch means the ambushed death,
And a moving twig is a danger sign;
Where a sudden shot from an unseen foe
May swiftly speed from the tangled vine;

There hour by hour in the darkness deep,
With ears alert and straining eyes,
There hour by hour with nerves intense,
The picket waits for the sun to rise.
Within the lines he is pacing now;
He is guarding to-night his country's pride.
To-morrow — who knows, when the roll is called,
If an answer will come, when his name is cried?

As he paces alone in the forest dense,
As he anxiously peers through the grass and the trees,
As he hears the night birds faintly call,
As he notes the sullen roll of the seas,
Should but the faintest step be heard;
Should but a twig be swayed out of line;
Swift to his shoulder his rifle is brought,
"Halt, Who goes? Give the countersign."

There is none so brave, and none so true,
Who may stir one step till he renders the word;
And none may pass by the picket there,
Till the countersign for the night is heard.

So as we mark out our camp ground again,
Light up the camp fires and call back the men,
How shall one know that the "Now" is like "Then?'
How shall one cross the line?
What is the word to admit one here?
What is the word that brings good cheer?
What shows each, he has nought to fear?
What is the countersign?

No one may enter this company old
Save by the tie that leads all to the fold;
Welcome to foes or to hearts that are cold
    Never this class extends.
Nought we desire but the grasp of hands,
Warmth of hearts though from distant lands;
Here old comrade by comrade stands;—
    Bonds that Time ne'er rends.
Hear ye the word, as we once more dine,
Word of admittance to old Eighty-Nine.
Hear ye the genuine countersign
    It is "Friends — old friends."

"Friends, old friends"— how much that means!
    It means the old laugh, the old voice, the old jest.
It means the old handshake, the slap on the back
    Of the days when we rollicked with spirit and zest.

"Friends, old friends"— how little they change!
    As we look at them now, why, the years seem like days!
There is Bill, and Ned, and Jack, and George,
    With the same old face and the same old ways.

"Friends old friends"— how the scenes tumble back —
    That day on the river, that night in the yard,
That dinner at Parks, and the Holly-Tree eggs,
    That drive to the Hawthorne, those Midyears hard!

"Friends, old friends" — how we guyed and were guyed!
    You remember the time honored club table binds,
That bonfire on Holmes', and Leavitt and Pierce,
    The dry drunks, the Med Fac, the longhaired grinds.

"Friends, old friends" — those are magical words.
    How the countersign opens dim vistas long;
Barrett Wendell's watchchain, and "Stubby" Childs,
    The torchlight processions, the Institute Song,
That Junior class Dinner, the street car strike,

Compulsory prayers, and "the Widow," the Dean;
And old Billy Tupper, your goody, the "Coop,"
And Henshaw and Reynolds, the fat and the lean,
The famous hard scraps between Austin and Ashe,
Those scarcely less noted 'twixt Marquand and Grew,
Jimmy Ropes' wild behavior, and Shaler's old hat,
And old Ned Storrow's non-sinkable crew,
The Art club's President, Billy Odell,
The Prexy's delightful and cordial bow,
The glacial Bursar, Memorial soup,
The shrinking and delicate voice of Howe,
The sermons of Prescott alleged to be jokes,
The legs of Pfeiffer, the smile of Mandell,
The Signet's debauches, the Monthly's fun,
The frequent consignments of Yale to Hell,
Jake Woodbury's leaning towards running the college,
Darling's high collars, the shape of Deblois,
The nitro-glycerine tremble of Cooke —
The squeak and the crimson-hued hair of Royce,
The "damned good fellow," of old Frank Parker,
And Hunneman's solemn and lengthy verse,
Old John of Orange, and Weaver, his double,
Jim Whitney's size, and Taylor's curse,
Meeker's modesty, Winkler's A's,
Norton's phillipics on college art,
Wardman's pictures, and Taussig's smile,
The soul-thrilling, reports for Hart,
The bull-dog football plunges of Harding,
Jack Morgan's omniscience, and Manley's shirts,
"Do you Wear Pants," in street cars appearing,
Dixey's "Adonis," and shows without skirts,
Rantoul's head, to front rows best suited,
What Tommy Talbot did not know of games,
Trafford's — the fooler of Elis — sedateness,
A pair of Kings, named Harry and James.

But as the veteran visits the battlefield
After the years have rolled on since the fray,
Vainly he searches to trace the entrenchments,
Seeking the spot where he stood on that day.

Hid is the wall, in whose life saving shelter
Sturdily battled the soldiers in blue.
Over it clambers a tangle of brambles,
Rises a forest of pine trees anew.

There on the hill, where the battery thundered
Storms of shells from the guardian wood,
Fields of feathery barley are swaying;
Houses rise where the soldiers stood.

Not one sign of the graves, that clustered
After the fight near the little stream,
Which ran bubbling between the forces.
— Even the brook 's a forgotten dream.—

Nought of the well-remembered landscape
Looks as it looked through the powder smoke;
Yet, in his mind he sees the old Company;
Still hears the word that his Captain spoke.

So, as we plod back to Cambridge town,
Much is gone, that of yore held renown.
Gone is our glorious Holmes's field.
How the buildings around it pealed,
With our cheers, when the willow trees
Saw the ball sailing by on the breeze!
How old Bingham and Downer's arm
Made the Yale men blue with alarm.

Gone is U. 5 and U E. R.
Gone are the hard fought tugs of war
Gone are the Glee club's temperance trips.
Gone are Norton's Fine Arts tips.
— The Fogg Museum of Art, 'tis said,
Makes Norton exclaim "The arts are dead."—

Gone is Carrie Harris's card.
Gone are the bonfires in the yard.
All now rejoice in an orderly way;
And for the fuel, beforehand pay.
— Surely this is degenerate;
We always used the citizen's gate.—

Gone is bloody Monday night.
Gone is the Class Day Tree and the fight.
Gone is the Class Day Song, thank the Lord.
— College poetry was always a fraud.—

Gone are the Latin Commencement degrees.
Gone are the splendid Main Street trees.
Gone is Lovering's Physics dry.
Gone is the Harvard Faculty.
"Faculty of the Arts and Sciences"
That is one of the new appliances.

All is changed — but old friends remain;
So we come back to those words again.
"Friends, old friends" for, when all is said,
Nothing is better, alive or dead.

Ye return once more to your homes, Eighty-Nine;
But ye cannot forget your countersign;
For Harvard gives it to you.
'Tis Harvard who gave you your loyal friends;
And, as slight return, Fair Harvard depends
On her sons to be loyal and true.

Those who struggle for empty fame,
Careless of ties in life's hot game,
Reckless of friends whose career they maim,
Those Fair Harvard shuns.
But they who stick by their comrades old,
They who ever their honor uphold,
Who fight for others, not merely for gold,
Those are her loyal sons.
